The Banshee, from London via Port Phillip, is a very fine vessel, and has exhibited her sailing qualities in the fullest extent by passing every vessel she has met with between England and this port, and passed five between Sydney and Melbourne. The Fitzroy.—This fine screw steamer, which arrived on Thursday, from Melbourne, is now lying at the Flour Company's Wharf, undergoing a thorough overhaul; her old cabins will be taken down and new ones put fit their place, to accommodate a larger number of passengers; she will be laid up about ten days, and it is the intention of her owners to run her between this port and Melbourne.

The Melbourne.—The screw of this vessel was taken on board on Saturday afternoon, but owing to the difficulty of finally fixing it, the arrangements for its proper working could not be completed until yesterday morning about 11 o'clock, when she got her steam up and proceeded down the harbour, and after remaining some time in Neutral Bay for passengers, &c., cleared the Heads 2.0 P.M., and under a cloud of canvas was soon out of sight to the southward, with a fine breeze at N.E. Every assistance was rendered by H.M. ships in sending men on board with a diving apparatus to remedy some little obstacle in the working of the fans. Captain Hutton expressed himself entirely satisfied with the whole of the arrangements connected with the repairs. The following is the gold shipped by her: 270 ozs. Joseph Simmons, Sen.; 212 ozs. 6 dwts. John Rickards; 96 ozs. 8 dwts. H. G. Nelson; in all 578 ozs. 14 dwts.

ASSIZE INTELLIGENCE.

BATHURST CIRCUIT COURT.

Wednesday, March 2.

Before his Honor the Chief Justice.

BATHURST MAIL ROBBERY.

Joseph Hudson and James Goodwin were indicted for stealing, on the 17th of August last, at Bathurst Plains, 151 ounces of gold, the property of Robert Forbes and another, and 51 ounces of gold, the property of Joel Henry Asher.

The prisoners pleaded not guilty.

Mr. Foster appeared as counsel and Mr. Serjeant as attorney for Goodwin; Mr. Holroyd appeared as counsel and Messrs. Home and Wadeson as attorneys for Hudson.

The Solicitor-General opened at some length the facts as proved by the following evidence, admitting in the outset that the proof of the case depended mainly upon the testimony of the accomplice White, who had taken a very active part in the robbery.

Robert Forbes examined: I am a gold-buyer at Sofala, in partnership with Mr. W. Nash, of Sydney. On the 16th of August last I put into the Post-office at Sofala 154 oz. 12 dwt. troy of gold. It was tied up in calico. I delivered it to Mr. Capps, the Postmaster of Sofala. It was the property of Mr. Nash and myself. It was bought with Mr. W. Nash's money. I purchased the gold, and had an equal interest in it. I paid £2 11s. 2d. postage. I have since recognised some of the gold as my property.

The cross-examination of this witness was postponed.

John Keesing, examined: I was a gold buyer at Sofala in August last for Joel Henry Asher. On the 16th of August I sent by post 51 ozs. odd dwts. and grains of gold; I put it in a chamois bag, and deposited it with Mr. Capps for transmission to Sydney. There were some Oakey Creek nuggets and amalgamated gold in the parcel, and I saw some gold very like mine on the 6th September in this court. I believe the nuggets were the same. The amalgamated gold was in very small quantity, and I did not see any amongst the gold, but there was a flat piece which I had hammered which I recognized.

Cross-examined by Mr. Foster: The gold was directed to my brother, who was in Sydney at that time, August 16th.

John Sherman, examined: I am the Chief Constable of Bathurst; I produce some gold which was before the magistrates when the prisoners were committed. It was got from Mr. Tolano on the 4th of September. The gold partly identified by Mr. Keesing was not separated from the bulk of the gold.

Mr. Forbes, re-called: I identify two nuggets, and a small piece of gold perforated by nature, also a flat piece hammered, and a piece with a crystal of red quartz in it; I picked these pieces of gold out on the 4th of September; I had described some of the gold previously; I had purchased from Mr. Layard some of the gold which had been heated; I can positively identify six nuggets, including the hammered one; I found some sealing wax amongst the gold, and I see the impression of the fibres of the string on one side, and the impression of the rim of the seal which I produce on the other.

Cross-examined by Mr. Foster: I swear positively to one piece of the sealing wax; I swear positively to the gold, but not so positively as to the wax; I always at that time tied the bags with string; the fibres of the string are one principal point I swear by; I expect if these prisoners get convicted to get my gold back, or compensation; I swear to the piece of gold "perforated by nature;" it came into my possession between the 1st and 16th of August; I bought this piece of gold from a digger; I think I will swear positively that I did not buy this piece of gold before the 1st of August; I am Mr. Nash's son-in-law; the gold was bought with Mr. Nash's and my money; I swear that in gold buying I am a partner with Mr. Nash; I am to have half the profits, and Mr. Nash the other half; I have never sent any gold down to Nash and Forbes, only to Nash; I was authorised by Nash to send gold down by the post; I gave £3 1s. 6d. per oz. on the average for this gold; I buy by the troy oz.; Mr. Capps did not weigh the gold; I weighed it by a steelyard.

Re-examined: I invest my profits in the transactions with Mr. Nash.

Henry Rotton, examined: I recollect the mail starting from Bathurst on the 17th of August last; the prisoner Hudson rode a horse and took the mails on horseback; he was accompanied by a Chinaman; I saw Hudson about the middle of the same day; he was under my verandah; he told me that some person came alongside of him, caught hold of the stirrup, threw him off and then rode away; that the man was walking before him as he came up and he took no notice of him; that he saw the Chinaman thrown off first, and as he was looking round before he knew what he was about he was under the mare's feet, and the man galloped off with the bags; the big bag was on his horse, and the small bags on the Chinaman's horse; he had been in my service since 1st January, 1852, at £3 a week; the robbery took place between the Plains and the Green Swamp.

Cross-examined by Mr. Holroyd: I have known as much as 160 lbs. weight of gold sent by the mail at one time, whilst Hudson was driving and without any passengers or guard.

William Thompson examined: I am Postmaster, at Bathurst; I recollect receiving a bag from Sofala addressed to Sydney, on the night of the 18th of August; I think I received it from West; the bag was heavy, as if gold was in it; it was sealed; I delivered it to Hudson to go to Sydney; he came for the mail bags about four A.M., rather before daylight; he had no vehicle with him; I carried out the bags to him; he was at the door.

Cross-examined by Mr. Foster: It would take an hour to go to the end of the Plains.

Mr. Rotton was recalled, and proved that the mail left Bathurst in the month of August, at eight o'clock in the morning, and on the 16th it left Bathurst at that hour.

John Rosier examined: I am the boatman at the punt; I recollect mail bags being left at my place at different times; I recollect hearing of the mail being robbed a day or two after it was done; the Sofala bag might have been left or it might not; I recollect the Sofala bag being at my place; I cannot say who brought it: it was an hour and a half there; Mr. Rotton went away with the Sofala bag; the Sydney bags were taken away together, and Mr. Rotton went with them; I think West and Mr. Rotton took away the bags; West was the Turon mailman; I heard of the robbery on the Wednesday or Thursday after; Mr. Rotton was there; West came down with the cart, and Rotton and West went away with the bags; Mr. Drew and Mr. and Mrs. Bullock were the only persons at my place whilst the Sofala bags were there; I never recollect telling Mr. Rotton that the Sofala bags had been taken to the Post Office by two men; I can't say who brought the Sydney mail; I carried some of the bags to the cart; what I carried were not heavy.

Mr. Rotton re-called: I was only once at Rosier's; that was on the night of the 16th of August; I was at the boatman's house at 7 P.M.; I did not see the Sofala bag.

Mr. Thompson re-called: I received the Sofala bag late in the evening, about 6 P.M.; it usually arrives at 4 P.M.

John Rosier re-called: I recollect being examined before Major Wentworth and Mr Heathorne; I can't say how long it was before I heard of the mail robbery; I cannot swear that the Sofala bags were taken away before Mr. Rotton came, but I am of opinion they were not.

Mr. Thompson re-called: I find by an entry in the book that I received the Sofala mail at 4 P.M., and the Sydney mail at 8 P.M., on the 16th of August; I despatched the Sydney mail next morning at 8 A.M., and not at 4 P.M.

William Grey examined: I am a surgeon residing at Sofala; I submitted some gold to a process of cleansing for Mr. Layard, and I believe the gold produced is some of it.

William White the accomplice was next examined: I am under committal on this charge; I formerly drove the Bathurst mail; I managed formerly the Turon mail for Mr. Rotton; I recollect on the night of the 16th of August seeing the Turon bags at the Punt house; I was only a minute there; two or three women were there, and a man of the name of Mills; I dont know what became of the mail bags that night; it was half-past five o'clock when I saw them; I took one and lifted it up. It weighed 15 to 20 lbs.; I took it to be gold; the bag was sealed; I had occasion to go over the river for two saddles for Mr. Watt; I called to see if the Sydney or Sofala mail was in; the Sydney mail was not in; I came back into Bathurst; I don't know any thing more about the bags that evening; I had not them in my possession that evening; I had had some conversation with Hudson three weeks or a month before the robbery; the conversation was that the first opportunity that would suit, I was to meet him at the edge of the Plains, and take the bags and give him his share; I saw Hudson the evening previous to the morning of the robbery; there was a China boy only going down with him; I saw Goodwin afterwards and he agreed to go with me; I was not more than a quarter of an hour with Hudson that evening; next morning Goodwin and I started off at six o'clock to the edge of the Plains; we went on the new line part of the way and turned off to the left near Major Wentworth's; we were at the edge of the Plains at eight o'clock, two hours before Hudson came up; I was standing with Goodwin alongside of the road; the China boy was 60 or 70 yards behind Hudson; it was agreed that Goodwin should go to the China boy, and that I should go to Hudson; Hudson said the bags are fast to the saddle; that I was to chuck him off, mount the mare and ride away, and that there was nothing in the China boy's bags; I did so, and went 150 yards into the bush, and let the mare go; he went a mile and half into the bush and took out the money, letters, and gold. The gold was in two bags, one was an osnaburgh, and the other a leather bag; we opened some letters, but were disturbed by a flock of sheep; we went further off and opened the remainder of the letters; we got and took out £107 in £10, £5, and £1 notes; we each took £5 and planted the remainder of the notes and the gold in a tree; we proceeded to Kelso and came by Mr. Richard's house in the direction from the Turon; we went to Barsden's public-house; we stayed there nearly two hours; Barsden said one of my men wanted fresh horses, as the coach was stuck at the Turon; I never told him I came from the Turon; I went to Greer's public-house at Kelso the same evening; Toy came there; I and Toy came up to Bathurst together, and Goodwin came by a different way; Goodwin and I went on the following Saturday, I on horseback and Goodwin on foot, to get the notes and gold; we tied the gold in a cotton handkerchief and divided it into two packets, and carried it in two pockets; in the first instance we put the gold together in the osnaburg bag; I don't know if it was secured by string; I think we cut it open with a knife; we did nothing with the property that day; I left it at Goodwin's till the Tuesday following; Goodwin and I agreed to sell the gold; I had not seen Hudson then from the time the mail robbery took place; I never saw Hudson from the evening of the robbery until after the gold was sold; I saw Hudson on the evening of the robbery at Rotton's; I asked him what the magistrates said to him or to them; he said that he had told them that he was robbed by a tall and a short man; I recollect now I saw Hudson the next morning; Hudson and I came together from Goodwin's in the evening; we came to Mrs. Whitton's corner and parted, as Hudson said it would not do to be seen too much together; he said he'd gammon sick, and stop at Hartley; next morning Hudson and I went to Aaron's to have something to drink, and then to De Clouett's for the same purpose; we next went to the barber's shop, and there we parted; I did not see Hudson after this; Goodwin suggested that the gold should be sold to Morgan; Goodwin asked Morgan if he was buying gold, he said he was, and that he was giving £3 1s. an ounce; on the day week of the robbery (August 24), we went to Morgan's about 11 o'clock; Goodwin said, "I've a little gold I can sell you;" Morgan said, "if you will bring it up I'll buy it of you." Goodwin went for the gold, and when he returned he went up stairs into a bedroom and weighed it; there were six weighings of 30 ounces each, and 8 ounces besides, making 188 ounces; Morgan only gave £3 an ounce, and said that as it was a large sum of money we must knock off the shilling an ounce, which we did; Morgan gave us £22 in cash, and said that if we called the next day he would pay us the balance; the next day Goodwin and I went to Morgan's at half-past 11 to receive the money; the house was full of people, and Morgan told us to call again in half an hour, which we did; he went into his big room and said he would draw a cheque, which he did for £500; he went out and returned, and paid us £300 in £1 notes, and £200 in £10 notes, and said if we called again he would pay us the balance; the £1 notes were new notes of the Bathurst Bank; on the evening that we received the notes we went to Aaron's, and I gave Goodwin 100 £1 notes, and seven £10 notes, together with one £5 note I got from Morgan the night before; all the money we got out of the letters, Goodwin got, except the £1 notes; I saw Hudson a night or two after the sale of the gold at Rotton's door; I asked him if he wanted money; he said very badly, and added, have you "put it away," meaning selling the gold; I said yes, a portion of it; I did not tell him I had sold all. I took him into Butler's public-house, and gave him one of the books of £100 and £1 notes, and I told him that if he came to Goodwin's next journey we would equally divide the remainder. The next time I saw Hudson was a week after in the watch house. I told Hudson there were £107 in the letters. I told him that we had only sold a portion of the gold. I recollect the constables coming to me three or four days after the sale of the gold; I was the first taken into custody; Goodwin was taken the same morning; the same evening Hudson was taken into custody; I was in bed when I was taken; I had over £170 when I was taken; I gave Sherman, the Chief Constable, some excuse which induced Sherman to go away in the first instance; I went next morning to Goodwin's, and stopped there all night; the following morning I was apprehended; I had £164 or £165 at the time; the remainder I had given to Goodwin "to put away" for me; the gold was in a red handkerchief when it was brought to Morgan.

Cross-examined by Mr. Foster: I had been running a coach before this; I had a share in one; Hudson was a common man driving the mail; I was coachman to Mr. Beddek; I believe there was a robbery, but the Windsor mail was never stopped after I left the Windsor road; Hudson proposed the robbery to me a month or six weeks before; Hudson had not known any roguery of me before; I swear that Hudson proposed the robbery to me; I did not agree to it till some time after; it was eight or ten days before I agreed to it; I turned it over in my mind and thought it would be a good job; I purchased the coaches from Morgan a few months not a year before. It was last January twelvemonths I purchased the coaches from Morgan. I think I owe Morgan a trifle on that contract, about £20. I swear I do not owe him £60 or £80. There was a bill out which is now paid. The bill was for £20; it was £60, but I paid off all but £20; I never went with Hudson to the Black Bull after the robbery, and before the sale of the gold; I never took Hudson to the Black Bull after the robbery; I took Kendall, or he took me; there were some women in the punt-house, but I did not know any of them. I never told Captain Battye that I saw one of the women lifting up the mail bags in the punt house; I never went with any person to Captain Battye to tell him that I could give a description of the persons who committed the robbery; neither M'Evoy of Winburndale nor Ellison of Parramatta, were taken up in consequence of information I gave to Captain Battye; I never but once was with Captain Battye; it was two or three days after the robbery; I made an affidavit before Captain Battye; what I swore in that affidavit was true, as true as every thing I have sworn to-day; I don't think it is likely I mentioned myself in that affidavit; I never knew I was to be admitted an approver till now; I am giving evidence from remorse of conscience for the public good; Hudson had said something about me, and I was determined to pay him off by saying something against him; that was the other bit of consideration that induced me to be an approver; I don't think I was in Morgan's house for a week before the robbery; and I have never been there since the day after the gold was sold; I think I had a glass of ale at Morgan's the day the money was received; we had nothing on the other day; we sold Morgan all the gold; we had weighed it in a lump before we went to Morgan's; we weighed it in a common scales in a pot altogether; when we first went to Morgan's he was standing at the door, Goodwin applied to Morgan to buy the gold. I remember talking to Morgan till Goodwin returned. We were only in the bedroom at Morgan's the first day, and only in the large room the second day when I had the ale. I never got drunk at Morgan's, and laid down on the sofa. No money was taken out of my pocket at Morgan's, and returned to me. Nothing was said about the gold being dirty. Morgan did not say a word about stopping the £30. We never called to ask him for the balance. I have always told the same tale ever since I have been in gaol that I have told to-day; I swear positively that I never went to the Black Bull with Hudson to see Captain Battye.

By Mr. Holroyd: I never borrowed any money from Hudson. I counted the £1 notes in the books when I received them from Morgan. I planted one book containing 100 £1 notes in a boot behind my bedroom door, to which room Bridget Hushan, who lives with me, had access. I never counted the notes between the time I received them from Morgan, and giving them to Hudson; when I told Hudson that I had not sold all the gold I told him a lie.

Re-examined: I was mail driver myself some time ago. Mr. Rotten lent me £100 to pay Morgan. I have had no intimation that I shall get off if I give evidence. Hudson would not have known what was in the mail at all, if we had not told him.

Raphael Tolano examined: I recollect buying some gold from Morgan on the 23th of August. The quantity I bought was 202 oz. 6 dwts. He brought the gold to me in two parcels, the parcels were about 150 oz. and 50 oz.; I got 18 or 19 oz. of gold afterwards, which I mixed with it. The large bag containing 168 oz. was exclusively Morgan's gold, the other bag contained gold I bought from some one else. I asked Morgan a day or two before if he had any gold to sell; I made the agreement on Friday, and it was delivered on the Saturday following.

John Sherman recalled: I recollect going to White's place on the 30th August, a little after twelve at night; I found in his pocket a book of 84 new £1 notes, 7 £10 notes, and a few shillings. I went to Morgan's, and in consequence of what Morgan said I let White go. On the following night I went to White's house, and got in through the window, and we searched for him till daylight, and we went to Goodwin's. White's woman was on the sofa; White was half dressed; I searched White, and found £56 1 notes mostly separated, but not all parted, and 7 £10 notes; I took White and Bridget Hushan into custody, and from information I received about two £1 notes, I went to Goodwin's, and said to him, did you give James Flynn two new £1 notes; he said yes, I took them from two diggers for two pairs of boots; I asked him if he had any more notes about him, he said yes, and produced five £1 notes and one £5, and said he had taken them in the way of trade.

Alfred George Shadforth proved that some of the notes stuck together when the prisoners were before the magistrates

C. C. Sherman recalled: After Goodwin was in custody I searched his kitchen. Constables Finnerty and M'Fadden went with me. I pulled up some of the bricks in the kitchen, and found a package of 31 £1 notes, all new. They were in paper, and tied with shoemakers' thread. These notes were part of the numbers in the same hundred as those found on White. On the 23rd of September I found in Goodwin's yard, near the fence, ten £1 notes, new but dirty. The numbers of these notes were in the same handwriting as those found on Goodwin's person. I found nothing more.

Cross-examined by Mr. Foster: I found nothing in Goodwin's house until Goodwin was apprehended.

Re-examined: I went with White to the place where he said he had opened the bags and been disturbed by the sheep, and I found the halves of two £50 notes.

By Mr. Foster: Goodwin said he had paid two £1 notes to Flynn, and I found this correct.

George Ferguson examined: I am accountant at the Bathurst branch of the Union Bank. Morgan has an account there. I cashed a cheque for £500 on the 25th day of August. I cashed it in £200 in £10 notes and £300 in £1 notes, the latter in books. The numbers in the books of the £1 notes issued in the same week ranged between 258,801 and 259,600, and the three books of notes given to Morgan must have been within these numbers, and were dated May 1.

Thomas Finnerty examined: I am lock-up keeper at Bathurst. On Friday, the 3rd of September, I found under the fireplace at Goodwin's a paper package covered with tin, which contained three £10 notes, six £5 notes, and six £2, and four skeleton keys. I searched again on the day Sherman found the notes near the fence, and found a very small bit of gold in a box; I apprehended Hudson; I asked him if he had any money about him; he said yes, and produced a bank receipt for £75, and two £1 notes, dated May 1, 1852, and numbered 259,337 and 259,333.

Cross-examined by Mr. Foster: Goodwin said he had paid £2 to Flynn, and when I showed the notes I got from Flynn to Goodwin he said they might be the same; I have known Goodwin for some years, and always considered him an honest man; he is a shoemaker by trade.

Edward M'Grath examined: I am a sergeant in the mounted patrol; I accompanied Hudson to Hartley on Saturday, September the 4th; we went to his residence, where his wife lives; he asked his wife if she had got that money; she said yes; Hudson said bring it here; she went into an adjoining room, and produced three rolls of £1 notes, amounting to £64; they are all of the same hundred, between 259,303 and 259,350.

Cross-examined by Mr. Holroyd: Hudson told me that he had received the money from White, on account of a debt due from White to him.

Joseph Henry Barsden proved that White and another man whom he did not know were at his house on the 17th of August last; White asked for a bottle of ale, as he said he was fatigued from looking after horses at Howard's; this was between three and four o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Foster objected to the case proceeding further against Goodwin, as the property was improperly laid in Forbes and another and Asher; and that if the prisoner could have been indicted at all he should have been indicted as a receiver.

Mr Holroyd urged the same objections in favour of Hudson.

His Honor overruled the objections, but took a note of them.

Mr. Foster addressed the Jury for Goodwin. The learned Solicitor-General has made out a very specious case, but he told the Jury that the evidence of an approver must always be looked upon with the greatest jealousy. When an accomplice is put into the box there is an implied engagement from the Crown that if the approver gives his evidence fairly he will be entitled to mercy from the Crown. And therefore an approver has every thing to gain. White has turned round upon Hudson, and he has said that his principal reason for doing so is that Hudson had told against him, and he (White) would tell against Hudson. White swore positively that it was he and Goodwin who sold the gold to Morgan. But when he was asked if he had not said that another man had sold the gold to Morgan, they would recollect how he fell—how he said, "I don't remember." Would any one believe the evidence of such an approver. White has sworn that he never was before Captain Battye with Hudson. But Captain Battye will be put into the box, and will prove beyond all doubt that White took Hudson to him and made certain statements; how could they believe White, who thinks to purchase mercy by pretending to speak the truth. There is some other evidence. That the mail was robbed and that Mr. Forbes identified some of the gold. But it is possible that Mr. Forbes' anxiety to get back his gold may make such a strong impression upon his mind as to lead him to scramble to the conclusion that the gold is his. The admission to Finnerty of the notes paid to Flynn bears out the representation that Goodwin is an honest man. If the evidence was clear that the notes were secreted by Goodwin it would be damning evidence against him. But none of this property is found till after Goodwin is in gaol. The case rests almost entirely on the evidence of White, who is altogether unworthy of credit.

Mr. Holroyd addressed the Jury for Hudson, and urged that there was no evidence whatever to support White in any connection between him and Hudson. The robbery seemed to have been planned by White, and though Hudson may have recognised White at the time of the robbery, he has given as a reason for not mentioning this circumstance that he was afraid that if he did so that he should loose the debt which White owed him. There was nothing to connect Hudson with the robbery except the testimony of White, and though he might have received the notes from White in payment of his debt, knowing at the time they were the proceeds of the stolen gold, that would entitle him to an acquittal on this information.

Edward Montague Battye examined by Mr. Foster: I am magistrate of the colony; I heard of the mail robbery on the 17th of August; I know White and Hudson; I was stopping at that time at the Black Bull, in Bathurst; I think I saw White on the evening of the day after the robbery; I don't know if any person was with him: I saw White, and after some conversation with White I saw Hudson in the bar; White left the room and I followed him and saw them together in the bar; White gave me some information; he came again a day or two afterwards; he came three times, and Hudson was with him twice; they were together; I don't recollect seeing Kendall with White.

Cross examined by the Solicitor-General: I can't be mistaken about Hudson coming with White on two occasions: I have a statement of White's which was taken on the second occasion; Hudson was under the roof at the Black Bull when I took the statement from White; Hudson was not admitted into the room; on one occasion they conversed together in the Bar for three minutes; I was subpœnaed three days ago.

White recalled: I said I did not recollect Hudson being with me at the Black Bull; but Kendall was with me; he told me that Captain Battye wanted me; he said so only once; If I went a second time to Captain Battye, it was without notice from Kendall; Kendall was sitting by me in the room whilst I was with Captain Battye; I was not there more than ten minutes; I signed a statement; Kendall heard all that I had to say to Captain Battye; I went into the room with Kendall; on the morning of the 19th Hudson went to Hartley.

Captain Battye recalled: I now recollect Kendall was present; White, to the best of my recollection had been at the Black Bull before; there were some remarks between me and the landlord about the two men being together under the same roof; it was in consequence of something that White said that I sent for him.

Mr. Burnside, of Bathurst, gave Goodwin a character for honesty for six or seven years.

Mr. Rotton was recalled, and stated that he believed that Hudson left Bathurst on the morning of the 19th of August, but he could not positively swear so.

Mr. Foster replied on this evidence.

The Solicitor General replied on the whole case. If the prisoners had not been very ably defended, it would certainly have been one of the clearest cases of proof by the testimony of an accomplice that ever was brought into a court of justice. The shuffling that White was charged with was speaking positively to a fact which he afterwards stated he did not remember. Even the memory of Captain Battye was defective, and he stated his impressions rather than what he actually saw, or it may happen that he has mistaken one time for another. There was ample confirmation of White's evidence on material points to show that his account of the robbery was substantially true.

His Honor, in summing up the case to the Jury, commenced by commenting on the evidence of White, the approver, in reference to his visits to the Black Bull to see Captain Battye, and to White's denial that he had met Hudson there, and put it to the Jury that he could not see what motive White had in denying that the prisoner was there; the circumstance of White and Hudson having been seen together before the robbery, could hardly raise any suspicion about their being seen together afterwards. It does not appear that Mr. Rotten has contradicted Captain Battye. Then, as to the accomplices; an accomplice comes before a Jury with great suspicion. If an accomplice is confirmed in some material points referring to the guilt of one or both prisoners, he may be believed, and though a Jury may convict on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, they are advised not to do so. Every accomplice gives evidence to save himself, and the Crown is pledged in honour to release him. His Honor was of opinion that the property was properly laid in Forbes and Nash. If Goodwin was at the robbery by previous arrangement, lending his assistance in the robbery, it constituted him a principal: and so with Hudson, if he was pretending to be robbed but assenting in what White was doing, he would be equally guilty with White. His Honor then carefully put to the Jury the principal points in the evidence which confirmed the testimony of the accomplice.

The Jury, after a short absence from Court, found both prisoners guilty. They were remanded for sentence.

The case lasted from 9 o'clock in the morning till half-past 10 at night, and from the crowded state of the Court appeared to excite the greatest interest.

Master and Servant.—On Saturday, James Footman, Mr. Hosking's coachman, was convicted of drunkenness in, and absence from, his master's service, and sentenced to be imprisoned for seven days. He was next charged with having assaulted the constable into whose custody he was given by Mr. Hosking; and the charge having been substantiated by evidence, he was found guilty, and sentenced to pay a penalty of 20s., with 4s. 6d. costs, or be further imprisoned for a second period of seven days.

Painful Occurrence.—Mr. Myers, of the South Head Road, tailor, on Saturday afternoon missed two daughters, one aged seven and the other five years. Search having been made, the poor girls were found in a water-hole near the gaol, both quite dead. The feelings of the afflicted parents we will not attempt to describe, and only parents will be competent to form an idea of the state into which such a calamity would throw them.

House Robberies.—About 5 o'clock on Saturday morning, Sergeant Adams, of the Police force, on duty in Elizabeth-street South, heard a cry of "thieves!—police!" and forthwith proceeded to the premises of Mr. Farrar, No. 32, Elizabeth-street South, whence the call proceeded, and in the back yard found a man, named James Hagerty, who, after having made a futile attempt to scale the fence, as fruitlessly sought to conceal himself among the logs composing a pile of firewood. Having secured the man, the premises were examined. In the yard, near the spot on which Hagerty was apprehended, was found a most miscellaneous assortment of goods, consisting of plated and silver spoons, jewellery, clothing, provisions, books, a screw-driver, a screw-hammer, &c., as well as a purse containing a small sum of money. On Saturday, Hagerty was brought before the Police Magistrate and Mr. Huntley. Mr. Alfred Farrar deposed that he was awoke by a noise in the yard. On looking out at the window, he saw a man (the prisoner) at the kitchen door, with a light in his hand. He called out to know his business there, when the light was at once extinguished and the prisoner endeavoured to make his escape over the wall. Having made an alarm, Sergeant Adams came up and took the prisoner into custody. Mr. George Morgan, residing at No. 32, Elizabeth-street, heard the alarm of thieves, arose, was present when prisoner was apprehended, and discovered the collection of goods now produced before the Court in Mr. Farrar's yard, and within a few feet of the prisoner. Mr. F. H. Beamish, residing at No. 33, Elizabeth-street, identified among the goods produced, a pair of boots, a handkerchief, and a couple of shirts, as his property, and which had been stolen from his kitchen; he valued them at 36s. 6d. Miss Cartwright, residing at 36, Elizabeth street, identified a gold locket, a gold ring, a smelling bottle, a silver penny, some handkerchiefs, and a pocket book, as her property, of the value of about £4; the pocket book contained money which was not hers; having examined her kitchen she found that two boxes had been broken open, whence these articles had been abstracted. The prisoner was then remanded until to-day to afford opportunity for the identification of the remainder of the spoils. Prisoner asked no questions of the witnesses, and never once looked up, as though desirous of concealing his features from observation.

Stealing Show Goods.—An old man named John Fitzpatrick, was on Saturday committed to take his trial for stealing five pairs of shoes and slippers, of the value of 30s., from the doorway of a shop in George street, kept by one John Frey.

NEWS FROM THE INTERIOR.

THE NORTHERN GOLD FIELDS.

(From the Maitland Mercury.)

Rocky River.

A gentleman just down from the Rocky River diggings reports, we regret to hear, several robberies by a gang of four or five bushrangers. On Sunday, the 20th February, Mr. Solomon's stores were robbed of 22 shirts; and four men were bailed up in their tent, one of whom was robbed by the bushrangers of £12, and the others of £6. On the Tuesday night following, the inmates of another tent, higher up the creek, were bailed up, and £15 taken from them. The police were in pursuit of the bushrangers, but had not succeeded in apprehending them.

At the Rocky River the diggers were doing generally very well. Many new hands were arriving, but on the other hand some were leaving, partly in consequence of the new gold regulations, and partly in consequence of the large nuggets found at Ballarat lately. Two new gold discoveries were spoken of—one on the Bundarra, from which place our informant had seen gold, small and in the matrix; the other at De Val's Mountain, or Devil's Pinch, three or four miles from Armidale, where three or four cradles were said to be at work, and doing well.

Hanging Rock.

February 27, 1853.—My report of the diggings for the week is still one of progressive improvement. Many partially worked claims, abandoned during the wet weather, have been reopened, and are now being profitably worked. Mr. Salter's party, of the blue tent, cleared 33½ ounces, £115 11s. 6d., in four hours, on the 12th instant., a single bucket of earth yielding 6 ounces. Clay's claim, adjoining the above, realized £203 2s. amongst four men. These are amongst the most fortunate on the upper end of Oakanville Creek, the lower end is also paying very well.

The dry diggings are proving very rich, and all the claims are taken up. No new diggings of consequence have been found out as yet.

There are many new arrivals, who I have no doubt, from the ground being occupied, will be forced to prospect, and will then extend our gold fields.

The Rev. Mr. Ridley held divine service on Sunday, the 27th, at the usual places.

Hanging Rock, Feb. 27.—The diggings generally are turning out pretty well, but the dry diggings are not as rich as it was expected they would be. One party in Oakanville Creek got fifty-five ounces last week; indeed, I believe they got it in three days. There are a good many coming to the Rock, and some leaving, and no doubt there are many persons doing very well, judging by the gold that went by the last escort.

DAVIS AND ANOTHER v. FAWCETT AND ANOTHER.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

Gentlemen,—As some of the passages in the judgment pronounced by his Honor Mr. Justice Therry in this case, and published in your journal of this morning, are calculated to raise a very prejudicial impression against me, I deem it necessary, in justice to myself, to state publicly that the case has been yet dealt with on the allegations of the plaintiffs only, and a demurrer thereto, which counsel considered should be put in, without my having an opportunity of answering those allegations (which I am prepared to do fully), and without the case being heard on its merits. I most positively deny that I wrote the letter set out in the judgment, or that I was party to it, either directly or indirectly. And I deny also that I made the admission which is alleged to have been made by me to Mr. Want, or that I have in any way participated in the frauds alleged to have been practised, or the profits of such frauds. I think it but fair to myself to mention that the plaintiffs do not pretend to have in their possession or control the original letter referred to, but merely claim to have a notarial copy of it; and I most positively assert that if that letter purports to be signed by me it is a forgery. My solicitor having laid before counsel the plaintiffs' bill of complaint as is usual, with instructions to advise thereon on my behalf, my counsel considered that the plaintiffs' bill was defective, and that the proper course was to demur, in which respect I was entirely in his hands, and the matter has only been argued on a mere dry question of law as to legal form, without reference to me or the merits in any way. At foot I beg also to give you my letter to Mr. Want, with his reply.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

R. FAWCETT.

George-street, Sydney, 5th March, 1853.

Sydney, 5th March, 1853.

Randolph J. Want, Esq.

Sir.—In the Sydney Morning Herald and Empire of this date, there is a report of a suit in equity by the British Australian Gold Mining Company, wherein my name is introduced as having acknowledged to you the receipt of a portion of two thousand pounds, as also a portion of the proceeds of the sale of shares &c., and a number of certificates of shares. As such an acknowledgement is quite foreign to my most distant recollection, may I beg of you a reply in writing to same, and remain,

Sir, your obedient Servant,

R. FAWCETT.

Sir,—I have to acknowledge your letter of this date. I have no recollection of your ever having made the admission to me mentioned in that letter.

I am Sir,

Your obedient Servant.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Our importations have been extremely heavy for several months, and consumption has more than kept pace with it. We have never known anything like the demand for goods experienced during the last six months, and which we notice is rapidly increasing. Labour being still at an immoderate rate, considering the attractions which our diggings afford. A large population has settled around the city, causing a great circulation of money throughout the trade. Extensive orders continue to pour in from the outports, many of which remain unexecuted owing to the scarcity of saleable articles; in many instances stocks are inadequate for the supply of our home demand. Teas have been in considerable request, but owing to the prices having run very close upon retail rates, the trade have been unable to lay in stocks with any prospect of realising covering rates. The arrival of the Alert from Shanghae, with an assorted cargo of very suitable packages will put the trade in a favourable position for replenishing their stocks, 80s. to 84s. for skins and congous will readily be obtained for fine samples.—Cigars are noted as an improving article in the Melbourne market, and in Sydney stocks have been run low.—Oilmen's stores are exceedingly scarce, of nearly all description.—Salt is quoted at £6 by the trade, but parcels are being offered at much lower rates.—Brandy is firm at 15s. 6d. to 16s. 6d., without a disposition to realize on the part of the largest holders.—Geneva is very firm.—Rum is without alteration.—Port Wine in small packages is in brisk demand, at extreme rates.—Beer is not to be purchased in quantity.

Sydney, March 5. R. HARNETT, Broker.

Five thousand tons of well assorted British cargoes would be readily taken without materially reducing present extravagant rates, as nearly all the stores are cleared.

GOLD CIRCULAR.

Notwithstanding the reports circulating in town that our colonial gold is selling in London at Sydney rates, our sales by auction of about 1500 oz. realised full rates, as will be seen by the annexed list of sales, this day:—

Sydney, March 6.

To THOMAS S. MORT, A. CAMPBELL, and M. METCALFE, Esqs., and the other Gentlemen signing the requisition.

Sophienburg, Saturday night, 5th March, 1853.

GENTLEMEN, I have this moment received the Requisition you have kindly favoured me with, as above, and for the distinguished honour you have thus conferred on me I beg you will accept my sincere thanks.

I wish I could have had a little more time to consider the subject, before returning an answer, (your Requisition having only reached me late this, Saturday, evening) but whatever my private feelings may be, I do not think that I should be doing my duty to my adopted country, by declining to accede to the request of so numerous and highly respectable a number of my fellow-citizens, to represent them in the Legislative Council. I therefore unhesitatingly place myself in the hands of the electors. If it be their pleasure to send me into the Council, as their representative, I will serve them zealously, and to the very best of my ability.

I will now briefly state my opinion on some of the principal topics which are likely to come before the Council.

The gold laws require, in my opinion, an immediate revision, in order that the gold digger may enjoy equally with others of her Majesty's subjects, the mild and equitable laws of our native land.

I am desirous of seeing the advantages of education extended to all classes throughout the length and breadth of the land; and there is no question that may be brought forward in the Council that shall receive greater consideration from me.

I have ever been of opinion that religious freedom is the inherent right of every man, and that no man has any right to pass judgment upon the conscientious principles of his fellow-man.

I cannot claim any merit for being a stanch advocate for the principles of free trade, as I can scarcely believe there are any sincere Anti-Free-Traders at the present day, for no one could possibly have observed the glorious results which have attended their introduction without being convinced of their expediency, and adaptation to the age in which we live.

I consider that Sydney is inadequately represented in the Legislative Council, and it shall be my earnest endeavour, if elected, to ensure for it a fair representation.

Should you do me the honour to return me as your representative, I shall be able to devote no inconsiderable portion of my time to attend to your interests, and that of the country in general, it being my intention shortly to retire from active business.

I am no public speaker, and feel satisfied that you might have fixed upon many other mercantile gentlemen, whose talents are infinitely superior to any I can lay claim to; but of this rest assured, that no one has more at heart the interests of this great mercantile city than myself.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen,
Your most obedient humble servant,
9106 THOMAS HOLT, JUN.

PURITY OF ELECTION.

THE following article is extracted from the Empire of the 19th July, 1851. The Committee appointed to conduct the Election of Mr. HENRY PARKES deem it right to reprint it at the present moment, to show that gentleman's consistent advocacy of the important principle which it advocates.

W. G. PENNINGTON,
Hon. Secretary.

PURITY OF ELECTION.
(From the Empire, July 19, 1851.)

However desirable it may be in the approaching contest for Sydney to have men returned who hold liberal views, and are especially sound on those great questions which have most prominently agitated the public mind, it is yet far more desirable, as conducive to our moral well-being, and inculcatory of high sentiments in the Australian people, to have the contest conducted on pure and enlightened principles. To this end, there is one electioneering practice,—a vestige of the old borough-mongering system, - which the electors should everywhere resolutely discountenance: we mean the personal solicitation of votes on the part of the candidates a practice alike degrading to the candidate and insulting to the constituency. The metropolis ought to take high ground in the conduct of its elections, and set an example worthy of being followed by the country generally. Every attempt to bias the free choice of the electors should be manfully and publicly denounced. Affected patriotism and high coloured liberality, are not more to be ridiculed than sickly condescension and fawning littleness are to be despised. Open bribery itself would scarcely be more harmful to our social interests than that species of coercion which no law can reach, and only public opinion can effectually control and suppress. If an arrogant landlord ask the votes of his tenants with an air of ownership, he should be met with a steady front of denial and contempt. It must be shown that there is a thorough independence in the discharge of the citizen's duty. We would ask no man a second time to vote for any particular candidate; but we would reiterate in the ears of all, for the hundredth time, the command of duty to vote according to their consciences. Let a conscientious regard for the sacred trust reposed in the elector, and a calm and dispassionate consideration of the claims of the candidate, determine the result of the contest.

No gentleman of honour, in this age of progress, will stoop to a personal canvass. If he possess the capacity of a legislator it will be discovered without his going like a mendicant from door to door. If the electors desire his services, he will have no need to hawk his talents round the town like a pedlar's wares. In offering himself to the suffrages of a free community, it is the candidate's imperative duty to explain clearly and fully the principles on which he is prepared to act, if elected; and the electors cannot too rigidly insist on this being done. But let it be done fairly and above board—by printed addresses and by public meetings. Let there be no skulking down back streets, bowing, with hat in hand, to poor men and old ladies. When any man takes such extraordinary trouble to have toilsome and serious duties cast upon him, it surely ought to awaken a reasonable suspicion that he must have ends in view other than the public good. Not only let the electors set their faces against the faintest semblance of corruption openly attempted, but let them undisguisedly mark their sense of the narrow minded impudence which would privately cajole them out of their votes. If any one of the candidates now before the electors of Sydney descend to a personal canvass, we shall be glad to see him defeated; and we trust the manlier part of the constituency will record their votes against him. Let him be an example to other evil-doers. For the honour to be obtained worthily, for the duties to be discharged honestly, the election of the representatives must be made with the utmost freedom and independence. Whether we win or lose, let us do our duty, but do nothing beyond it. If we are successful, let it be with feelings that could sustain us in defeat; if defeated, let it be with efforts that deserved success. In either case, let those who take the liberal side in the contest set an example of purity and freedom to their fellow-colonists. 7715

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF SYDNEY.

GENTLEMEN,—I have been unexpectedly invited, by the usual form of requisition from an influential number of your body, to offer myself as a candidate for the seat in your representation which has become vacant by the resignation of our late excellent member, Mr. Lamb.

For the last few years I have taken an active part in the public movements of this city, and, by this gratifying recognition of my humble services, I feel flattered into the hope that my efforts have been in some measure conducive to the public benefit. During that time, I have never thought of stepping aside from what I believed to be my path of duty, to seek for office or mark of distinction at the hands of my fellow-citizens; and there are those among you who know how ardently I have desired on the present occasion, to see a candidate, with higher abilities to serve you and stronger claims to your support, brought forward for your suffrages. The principles which I hold necessarily lead me to fix the standard of qualification for a Representative far above my own estimate of my capacity to fill with credit and usefulness that dignified and responsible office. Besides a sense of my own unfitness, the anxiety which I feel in the discharge of other important duties would urge me to decline the invitation with which I have been honoured, if I could feel assured that the public interests would be committed to hands abler and more willing than mine to promote and defend them. As it is, I do not feel warranted in taking any other course than acceding to your requisition After much thought, and consulting with friends on whose advice I set much value, I have made up my mind, in good faith and with a firm purpose, to place my services at your disposal. Should your choice, on the day of polling, be in my favour, my limited abilities shall be steadily and faithfully employed, in my new sphere of action, to advance the prosperity and freedom of the country.

It now becomes necessary for me to explain—and I will do so as briefly as I can— the principles which will regulate my public conduct, if elected to the distinguished post of your Representative. Throughout my life I have advocated the extension of political power to the great body of the people. The experiences of every day have tended to confirm my adherence to those principles of Progressive Reform which are now admitted to be the best safeguard of our British institutions, and the brightest glory of our national character.

I am an advocate of the National System of Education, believing it to be the best plan hitherto devised for extending to all classes the advantages of knowledge - that greatest blessing of civilised society.

I would extend the political franchise, that this great social blessing might follow, as well as on the ground of inherent right; for, assuredly we must look for enlightenment as the fruit, not wait to see it planted as the root, of sound and rational liberty.

As a leading principle, I would make population the basis of the representation, so that honest action might be given to a liberal franchise, in the electoral decisions of the country.

I am prepared to carry out to my utmost, in colonial legislation, the principles of that Free Trade Policy of the Imperial Parliament, which has already produced such magnificent results for the advancement of British commerce.

I am opposed to all State endowments for Religious purposes; but so long as the existing Schedule for Church support is continued, I will, if elected, vote for an equitable distribution of the public money to all Denominations.

These general statements of the principles which I entertain will indicate how I should be likely to act in the Council with reference to particular measures of legislation; but in those opportunities of intercourse which will occur before the day of election, and on the hustings, I shall be appy to explain my views, on any public question, to those of your number who may wish to ascertain more fully my opinions. I am called upon—without any motion of my own—by a voice which I do not feel at liberty to disobey—to submit my claims to your judgment. I know I must abide by your decision. My public conduct is before you, and open to the canvass of all; my sentiments have been frequently expressed, and at all times without disguise or fear. I only ask for myself, to be dealt with impartially; I only ask of you, to vote so as to satisfy your consciences and serve our country.

I have the honour to be, Gentlemen,
Your very faithful servant,
HENRY PARKES.
Sydney, February 25. 7160

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF SYDNEY.

GENTLEMEN,—I am anxious that my position as a Candidate for the honour of your representation should be clearly understood in one important particular. I have ever been opposed to the practice of a personal canvass on the part of candidates for legislative honours, as being directly at variance with purity and freedom of choice on the part of the Electors. On all fitting occasions I have advocated the principle, which is now uniformly acted upon in all the influential English constituencies, that the result of the poll should be left to the legitimate operation of public opinion. A community of freemen will enquire and decide for themselves as to who is best qualified to represent their political interests; and they will not need to be told, that he who can stoop to private entreaties for their votes, will not stand above inducements to sacrifice their liberties.

Consistently with my professions, and in respect for your character, I have abstained, and shall abstain, from personally soliciting a single vote in this election.

I have the honour to be, Gentlemen,
Your faithful servant,
HENRY PARKES.
Sydney, March 3. 7538

CITY ELECTION.—A public meeting of the Electors favourable to the return of William Thurlow, Esq., as a member for the City, will be held at the Olympic Circus, Castlereagh-street, THIS EVENING, 7th instant, at 7 P.M. Mr. Thurlow will attend.
7681 J. M. GRANT, Hon. Secretary.

ELECTORS OF SYDNEY!—Do not pledge your votes;—a Mercantile Candidate will be in the field on Monday.
7605 R. S. ROSS, Hon. Secretary.

CITY ELECTION.—A Meeting of Mr. Alderman Thurlow's supporters was held, after receiving the reports of the various Committees and those of the candidate, it was moved that Mr. T. Donahy take the chair, upon which Mr. Owen Joseph Caraher moved, and it was carried, that this meeting do adjourn until Monday, at 12 o'clock A.M., when they would consider and arrange for the meeting to be held at the Olympic Circus, Castlereagh-street, the 7th instant, at 7 P.M. J. M. GRANT, Honorary Secretary. 7798

Cumberland-street, Sydney,
1st March, 1853.

GENTLEMEN,—I have to acknowledge the honour of receiving your respectably and numerously signed requisition soliciting me to become a Candidate for the seat in Council for the representation of the City, vacated by your late member, John Lamb, Esq.

I thank you heartily for this distinguished mark of your approval, which, if it could be stamped with higher value, is more precious to me because you frankly state it to be the result of my public career in connection with the City, and the satisfaction you have felt in my discharge of the public duties devolving on me.

With the same spirit of frankness and candour in which you have addressed me, I accept your invitation, confident alike in the sincerity of your expressions of approval and your promises of support.

I agree with you, that in the turmoil of political events which of late years has agitated the colony you must have had fair opportunity of judging pretty accurately of the general scope and tenor of my political opinions, and far more for the sake of the advancement of those opinions which I hold to be true,—than for the possession of the honour you wish to confer upon me, do I rejoice to hear that those opinion are your own.

But at a time like this, when political integrity alone can safely pilot the ship of the state through the shoals and quicksands that surround it, it would not be just in me to withhold a definite expression of my principles from those who do not know me as well as you do.

Fortunately this may be done very briefly, as the great questions which interest the people of this colony are mainly important through their extreme simplicity. First, then, I am an advocate for the extension of Education to its utmost limit, and believing the National System the only one which can effect this leading object, I shall strenuously support it.

Second. I believe that any system which shuts up the land of the colony from settlement, or cultivation, is radically bad, and that it must impede, if not prevent, the advancement of the country. At the same time I have no hesitation in saying, that those great interests which have grown up with so much advantage to the colony ought to be treated always with a fair and just consideration.

Third. I repudiate any system of Legislation which shall involve distinctive laws for any branch of industry, which is recognised or permitted, or licensed by the Government, as a colonial pursuit,—and consequently, I believe the gold digger to be entitled to all the social and political freedom which is accorded to any other class of Her Majesty's subjects.

Fourth. I would assimilate our Constitution as nearly to that of England as possible, always bearing in mind that spirit of progress which is constantly tending in that Constitution to the enfranchisement, with political rights, of all men of mature age and untainted by crime.

Fifth. I will advocate to the full extent of my ability the principle of Free Trade, not only as it has been done by the Government, with a view to the promotion of commerce, but also for the full and fair development of the treasures of our soil.

Sixth. I am a friend to religious liberty in its fullest sense, but I think this liberty may be best preserved by every sect separately maintaining its own ministry and ordinances; at the same time I will advocate a fair division of the sums reserved for religious purposes to all sects alike, until a wise and better support to religion shall have been established.

These are the leading principles which will govern my conduct in the Council should you elect me.

For industry and energy in carrying out the details which these principles involve, I appeal to that experience of my past public life, which has invested me with that confidence you have been pleased to place in me.

I have the honour to remain,
Gentlemen,
Respectfully,
Your very faithful servant,
W. THURLOW.

BOURKE STREET, OPPOSITE BAPTISTS' GARDENS.
Large plots of Building Land, the Property of a party about to leave the Colony, and positively to be sold.
MR. MORT has instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, THIS DAY, Monday, 7th March, at 11 o'clock,
THREE PLOTS OF LAND, situate just off Bourke-street, opposite Baptist's Gardens, with frontage to a reserved road, leading from Bourke street to Dowling-street, facing the land of D. Cooper, Esq., and adjoining Mr. M'Grath's residence.
The Lots have from 100 to 150 feet frontage, by depths of 198 to 362 feet; the precise particulars of which may be learnt from the plan on view at the rooms.
As these building lots will positively be sold to the highest bidder, they are, from their position being a few yards beyond the boundary stone, well worth attending to. A few cheap buildings erected on them, would yield an immense return, especially as no Building Act interferes. 6753

An ALLOTMENT at Carcoar, being No. 1 of section 8, and containing half an acre.
The advantages of the dry and equal temperature of Brisbane to invalids, and particularly to parties labouring under consumption, or other disease of the lungs, have become so much appreciated, as to render the demand for house property far beyond the supply, and rents in consequence (and with the present inability to build) have advanced, and will advance considerably. It therefore behoves parties on the look out for a good investment or a residence in Brisbane, to watch this sale, the opportunities for making such purchases so seldom occurring.
The titles are first rate, but parties wishing further particulars may have them by applying to the proprietor of the property, John Ocock, Esq., Solicitor, Balmain. 3228
